PUBLISHER'S NOTE

This is Volume III, No. 3 of the ALMANAC OF CURRENT WORLD LEADERS, now being published in Los Angeles. The fourth number will be issued on October 1 and Volume IV will begin on January 1, 1961. If the change in publishing quarters, necessitated by operational requirements, has caused any inconvenience to our patrons we sincerely regret it. Readers can, nevertheless, expect a continuation of the same high quality of research and information as presented in the past, plus many new features such as the column, Editor's Notes, which will be found on Page v of this issue. Unfortunately it has been impossible to secure sufficient accent marks for this issue by press time. Rather than mislead readers by spot accent placement, we have decided to omit all accent marks until the next issue. However in many instances this information will be found by consulting previous numbers of the ALMANAC.

EDITOR'S NOTES

The ALMANAC OF CURRENT WORLD LEADERS takes great pride in welcoming yet another outstanding scholar to its Advisory Board. Professor James F. Coleman, Director of the UCLA African Studies Center and a member of that University's Political Science faculty, brings his experience and knowledge of African affairs to our publication in a year when at least seven states from that area will enter our listings for the first time.

EVENTS OF NOTE: Prince Norodom Sihanouk has become Cambodia's Chief of State. As the political leader of the country, he accepted this new position when the Regency Council, headed by Prince Sisowath Monireth, was unable to find a suitable successor to the recently deceased king . . . On January 1, 1960, independence came to the Cameroun Republic. Note that the "Cameroons" is that area still under British trusteeship and which will conduct a plebiscite in the fall to chart its political future . . . Ceylon's July 20th election has been called in an attempt to give the next government a legislative mandate, something which the March election failed to do . . . The complicated and difficult political maneuverings in the Republic of Congo produced a cabinet just six days before independence. Note that the Conakat Party is expected to hold the Economics Ministry . . . The French Community saw two newly independent countries formed in the past month: The Mali Federation of Sudan and Senegal and the Malagasy Republic (Madagascar). Since only fragmentary information is available on the latter (President: Phillippe Tsiranana), ALMANAC will wait until the next issue to enter this state in its listings . . . Premier Kishi and his government have resigned but have set no date for this action to become effective . . . A parliamentary form of government is emerging from the difficulties experienced by the Republic of Korea during April. The present government holds its position pending new elections . . . It is believed that Premier-Designate Somsanith of Laos has already completed his cabinet, although no details about it are yet available. This cabinet has been formed after six months of a caretaker government and six weeks of decision since the April elections . . . Somalia, a U.N. Trust Territory and Somaliland, a former British Protectorate which enjoyed four days of independence in the latter part of June, will merge into an independent state on July 1, 1960 . . . Turkey is writing a new constitution in the wake of abrupt governmental shifts in May. The National Union Committee has taken all executive and legislative responsibility pending the new constitution's completion . . . The Vatican's Secretary of State has requested retirement but our information indicates that the resignation has not yet been accepted.

EVENTS TO WATCH: The U Nu government of Burma deserves close attention as it is reported to be slipping below the high government standards set by the Ne Win military regime . . . Independence for Cyprus, twice postponed due to a knotty dispute with Britain over military installations, is nevertheless expected this year . . . Pakistan's answer to Brazil's brilliant new capital of Brazilia, is being built near Rawalpindi and will be called Islamabad . . . Chad, the Central African Republic, and the Congo Republic are seeking independence by August within the French Community as the Union of Central African Republics. Gaboon, seeking simultaneous independence within the community, will not join the proposed Union although it will closely co-operate with it.

INTERNATIONAL NEWS: Three of the European Communities are now holding discussions to explore the possibility of merging their now separate executive departments . . . Finland is faced with a number of difficult political decisions in considering joining the European Free Trade Association . . . The Conference on the Discontinuance of Nuclear Weapons Tests continues its sessions in Geneva while the Ten Nation Disarmament Committee suspended its meetings indefinitely on June 27, 1960 . . . A new international body, called the Caribbean Organization, has been formed. In replacing the Caribbean Commission, the Organization will extend its membership to all dependent and semi-independent states in the area.
